Full Service Network moves to US Steel Tower, Creates New Jobs

PITTSBURGH, PA (May 05, 2004) Pittsburgh based Full Service Network has relocated its corporate headquarters to the fifty-seventh floor of the US Steel Building. The lease was negotiated for eight years for over 14,000 square feet of space. The lease includes an option to expand into an additional 10,000.

"We're excited about moving into the US Steel Building and also about remaining in downtown Pittsburgh," said David E. Schwencke, founder and president of Full Service Network. "There were many options available outside of town, but this move encompasses our desire and commitment to staying in the downtown marketplace. Pittsburgh's a great place to live and work."

Company plans include using the space for fifty new jobs to be created throughout the summer. "We're happy to bring growth to the downtown employment market at a time when so many of our competitors are laying people off," said Schwencke.

In addition to office space, Full Service Network plans include using the new location as a hub for ultra-high speed fiber optic Internet service which will be introduced later this year as well as wireless WIFI internet access at strategic locations. These new services will be available to both residential and business customers in the Pittsburgh region.

Full Service Network (www.fullservicenetwork.com) is a telecommunications and Internet service provider serving approximately 12,000 residential and business customers in the Pittsburgh region for the last 14 years.
